In the years between 1963 and 1965 the Pius XII Memorial Library of Saint Louis University conducted a program to record on microfilm a selected group of the manuscripts housed in the collection of the present Pontifical University of the Gregorian at Rome. The materials selected comprise a collection of some 430 manuscripts, some of them multi-volume, and all of them written in the period from the late sixteenth century to the middle of the nineteenth century, with the majority being of the seventeenth or eighteenth centuries.

Most of the manuscripts represent the content of the teaching and lecturing of the professors at that university during those centuries. Most of them have never been printed and of those that have been printed many were only published in part. Philosophy is the queen of the sciences as far as numerical superiority goes, since of the 430 MSS, some 186 are about philosophical subjects, most of them being commentaries or teaching notes on the books of Aristotle with the books of the Physics being the most popular. Books of theology take up some 51 MSS of the filmed selection. Books on science, law, and the humanities are a far smaller group while the ascetical works (this would include sermons and sermon notes as well) form a group of some 100 MSS, and thus are the second largest portion of the filmed collection. The language of the MSS is either Latin or Italian almost entirely, and the copies are generally written in simple legible hands and with relatively few abbreviations.

The importance of the collection for researchers would seem to lie in the fact that these manuscripts represent a good cross section of the content and teaching methods of a most important Catholic university over a period of some centuries. In the midst of the present discussions of the various influences of the Tridentine reforms, such a collection should be of considerable interest to those researching such topics. For instance, a good comparative study of some of the main works in the collection as compared with similar books of scholastic philosophy and theology of the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries might prove or disprove a good many modern "assumptions."

The bulk of this article is a provisional listing by author, title, place, date, and number of pages. However, in many instances one, several or even all of these descriptive items are missing. In order to give some information on these missing items, the data as given in a brief card index at the Library of the Gregorian have been used as well as some of the notes of a librarian which are to be found at the beginning of a great number of the MSS. They often supply the name, title, a general date, i.e., 17th century, and at times the pages if they are numbered. In very many of the manuscripts the pages are not numbered and the count here given is merely the approximate number to indicate the size of the manuscript to prospective researchers. In the cases mentioned above, where the information was taken from the Gregorian Library index of the notes of a librarian appended to the manuscript, such information has been enclosed in square brackets: thus, "[17]" for seventeenth century as the date of the manuscript as found in one of the two mentioned sources. Whenever possible, the life dates of an individual Jesuit writer were verified in the massive work of Carlos Sommervogel (Bibliothèque de la Compagnie de Jésus . . . par les Pères Augustin et Aloys De Backer, Auguste Carayon, Nouvelle édition par Carlos Sommervogel, S.J., 9 vols. [Bruxelles & Paris, 1890-1898]). Three more volumes including various indexes were added by Pierre Bliard, S.J., and Ernest Riviere, S.J., 1909-1932. It is shown in this way: S.I, 196, which indicates the first volume of Sommervogel, column 196. Most of the time it was reasonably clear from the full name of the person that he corresponded with the same name given in Sommervogel, but usually the clincher was the biographical note which stated that the person had taught at the "Collegio Romano" which is the early name for the present Gregorian University. And in any case the reference to Sommervogel is given and the researcher can check the matter for himself. Very possibly there may be indications in the manuscript itself giving information about the work, its date, etc., and hence it cannot be overstressed that this article is a purely provisional listing and will undoubtedly be supplemented and corrected as researchers delve into these works. The anonymous works are listed in each division after the known authors and where possible the titles, as given on the manuscripts, are arranged alphabetically. Where no title is given, a provisional title or description is given and enclosed in square brackets. The full title of the department of the Gregorian University Library where the collection is housed is Archivum Pontificiae Universitatis Gregorianae, Fondo Curia. This is abbrevviated before the MS number in this article thus: APUG 330.

The whole purpose of this provisional listing is to make known the collection to researchers in such materials, and to encourage them to come and exploit these resources. The Vatican Film Library at the Pius XII Memorial Library of Saint Louis University has a number of Mellon research grants to be awarded each year and interested researchers are asked to write for more information on their availability. We hope that many of our readers will take advantage of the resources of this newly-announced collection.
